

DANILO NADA

NADA FIORENZO

PIEDMONT

The family lives and works in the Langa hills in the northwestern region of Italy, Piedmont, a land of great wines and the white truffle of Alba. This is where Barbaresco is born. Deeply rooted in these steep hills, Nebbiolo, Barbera and Dolcetto wines keep the wisdom of local farmers alive in the memory. Women and Men who have handed down to us this historic site which is now a Unesco World Heritage Site.

The company was born in 1921 when Carlo Nada, a dynamic Langa farmer, bought the Rombone farmhouse in Treiso. He passed it on to future generations: Fiorenzo, Bruno and finally to the young Danilo (born in 1986), who introduces respect for the traditions handed down by the elderly and environmental sensitivity.

The vineyards are located in the municipalities of Treiso and Barbaresco, small patches of land where the vines seek the sun in the slow passing of the seasons.

Both the vines and the soil are farmed with respect for the environmental balance, an essential condition for obtaining quality grapes.

Once the last bunch has been picked at the end of the harvest and the new wine is coming to life in the cellar, we are already thinking about the next harvest. We immediately begin with the tillage and nutrition of the soil to favour the balanced development of the new buds in the first warmth of spring.
